

Corrigendum: Resilience and Gender-Structural Change in Universities: How Bottom-Up Approaches Can Leverage Transformation When Top-Level Management Support Fails

María Bustelo*

Complutense University of Madrid (Spain)

Published: March 12, 2024

This corrigendum regards the article Bustelo, M. (2023). Resilience and Gender-Structural Change in Universities: How Bottom-Up Approaches Can Leverage Transformation When Top-Level Management Support Fails. Sociologica, 17(2), 17–36. <https://doi.org/10.6092/issn.1971-8853/17787>

The author requested to replace a word in order to correct an overlooked error as the sentence, which explains the difference between vice-rectors and delegates, refers to delegates and not vicerectors.

The correction regard the following sentence, in paragraph 4 (page 28):

The composition of governing bodies within universities can vary, but typically, these bodies are comprised of vice-rectors rather than delegates of the Rector. ~~These vice-rectors~~ The delegates are responsible for implementing specific measures or policies and liaising directly with the Rector, but they are not usually involved in the Rector's broader decision-making processes.

The article was amended on 20 December, 2023.

*  mbustelo@ucm.es